Reading: A Personal Transporter

If you are not traveling far from home, think about buying a personal transporter. A personal transporter is easy to use. Step on, turn the key, lean forward, and you start. If you lean forward more, you go faster. If you lean back, you slow down. Personal transporters can go about 12 miles an hour. They do not use gas; they are electric. You can travel about 10 miles on one electric charge.

Who is using these personal transporters? Post offices in several cities are buying them. It is faster for the mail carriers to deliver mail. In some cities, police are using transporters. In some airports, the workers are traveling between terminals on transporters. Some people are going to work on their transporters.

People can visit a new city on a transporter tour. Companies in cities in Europe, Asia, and the United States are offering "Transporter Tours." First, the company shows you how to use a transporter. Then, you can take a tour of a city like Miami, San Francisco, Paris, or Berlin.
