

Training for your first marathon

You don't have to be a world-class athlete to run a marathon. Just follow these simple rules.

- You must start training six months before your first race.
- You have to plan a training programme and train every week.
- You don't have to run every day and you can take a break during your run if you feel tired.
- You mustn't run if you feel pain. Stop straight away.
- You can't run long distances without lots of water. Drink it all the time!

Presentation

To talk about rules, we use the verbs must, mustn't, have to, don't have to, can and can't:

- To say something is obligatory, use must or have to:
You must start training. You have to plan.
- To say something is allowed, use can:
You can take the day off.
- To say something is not obligatory but allowed, use don't have to:
You don't have to train every day.
- To say something is not allowed, use can't or mustn't:
You mustn't run if you feel pain. / You can't run long distances without lots of water.

must, mustn't, can, can't

Must, mustn't, can and can't are modal verbs. They never change form and we don't use do, does or did to make questions and negatives:

I / You / He / She / It / We / They	must / mustn't	run every day.
	can / can't

Can	I / you / he / she / it / we / they	run every day?
-----	-------------------------------------	----------------

You can also ask questions with must (Must I run?), but it's uncommon.

have to, don't have to

Have to, don't have to are normal verbs. They change form and we use do, does or did to make questions and negatives:

I / You / We / They	have to / don't have to	run every day.
He / She / It	has to / doesn't have to

Do	I / you / we / they	have to run?
Does	he / she / it
