Presentation

Use to ... , for ... and so that ... to explain why people do something, or the purpose of an object. Phrases with these words answer questions with Why? or What for?

to + infinitive

Use to + infinitive to:

- say why we do something:
I bought them to use at work.
- answer questions with why: Why are you writing on them? To plan each stage of the project.

Only use to + infinitive if the subject of the sentence is the same as the subject of the infinitive:

I went to the shop to buy these. (= I went to the shop. I bought these post-its.)

for + noun

Use for + noun to say why we do something:

I need them for my work.

for + -ing

Use for + ing to talk about the purpose or function of an object:

They're great for planning.

so that

Use so that if we do something to get a specific or planned result. We often use it:

- with the modal verbs can, could, will or would: I like to move them around so that I can try out different ideas.
- when the result is negative: I bought them so that I wouldn't forget my ideas.

When the result is not planned, use so, not so that:

I lost my post-its so that I forgot my ideas.

We often use so instead of so that in everyday spoken English:

I cycle to work everyday so (that) I don't have to pay for a bus.
